Key Speakers

Dr. Kelly K. Koeller

MD, FACR
(Chief in Neuroradiology)

Kelly Koeller, M.D., F.A.C.R. earned his Doctor of Medicine from the University of Tennessee College of Medicine as a Health Professions Scholar supported by the United States Navy. Following completion of an internship at Naval Hospital San Diego, he served as a Naval Flight Surgeon for the Third Marine Aircraft Wing in California. He returned to San Diego for residency training in Diagnostic Radiology and then pursued a fellowship in Neuroradiology at the University of California at San Francisco. Following a return to Naval Hospital San Diego as a staff neuroradiologist, he was selected as the Chief of Neuroradiology at the Armed Forces Institute of Pathology in Washington, DC in 1996 and subsequently was appointed the Chairman and Registrar of the Department of Radiologic Pathology in 2001. He earned fellowship in the American College of Radiology in 2005. After 23 years of service, he retired from the Navy in 2005 and moved to Rochester, Minnesota to join the Neuroradiology division of the Department of Radiology at the Mayo Clinic, where he remains today. In 2013, he also assumed the duties as the Chief of Neuroradiology at the American Institute for Radiologic Pathology (AIRP) in conjunction with his activities at the Mayo Clinic.

Dr. Koeller's interests include all types of neoplasms affecting the central nervous system and head and neck, particularly in the setting of radiologic-pathologic correlation. He has contributed over 40 peer-reviewed manuscripts, numerous book chapters, and edited 4 installments of the Syllabus for the AFIP Radiologic-Pathologic Correlation Course. He has delivered nearly 400 invited lectures focused on neuroradiological imaging manifestations and their correlation with gross and histopathologic findings at educational and scientific symposia world-wide.

Dr. Mark D. Murphey

MD, FACR
(Physician-in-Chief, AIRP &
Chief in Musculoskeletal Imaging)

Dr. Mark D. Murphey has been an academic radiologist over 20 years and has directed all of his scholarly activities to his subspecialty of musculoskeletal imaging. In his early years at the University of Kansas, he published the first article on MRI of the sacroiliac joint. In 1993, Dr. Murphey moved to the Armed Forces Institute of Pathology (AFIP), which provided a unique opportunity to understand the pathologic basis of a disease's radiologic appearance. In 2010-2011, Dr. Murphey was instrumental in the transition from the AFIP to American Institute for Radiologic Pathology (AIRP) as a program of the American College of Radiology (ACR).

Dr. Murphey is currently the Physician-in-Chief of the AIRP. In his tenure at the AFIP and the AIRP he has particularly emphasized research on the imaging appearance of musculoskeletal tumors. Dr. Murphey's academic career has been extraordinarily fulfilling, and he hopes that his efforts have broadened our knowledge and understanding of the imaging of musculoskeletal disease.

Prof. Marilyn J. Siegel

MD, FACR
(Visiting Faculty in Pediatric Radiology)

Marilyn J. Siegel, M.D. is currently Professor of Radiology and Pediatrics at Washington University School of Medicine in St. Louis, Missouri. She is a recognized leader in pediatric radiology with a special interest in use of cross-sectional imaging techniques for evaluation of pediatric diseases. She is also an experienced thoracic radiologist. Dr. Siegel is the author of over 250 journal articles, 40 chapters, and 15 books. Dr. Siegel's teaching accomplishments have been recognized by the Teacher of the Year award at the Mallinckrodt Institute of Radiology and the Master Teacher Award in Radiology from the State University of New York.

Over the last decade Dr. Siegel has dedicated time to developing accreditation standards for CT body imaging and most recently for cardiac imaging for the American College of Radiology. For the last four years, Dr. Siegel has also devoted time to being chair of the diagnostic imaging committee for the Children's Oncology group and is initiating new standards for oncologic imaging in children. She is a well recognized lecturer and has participated in numerous national and international conferences addressing optimization of sonographic, CT and MRI techniques and their clinical applications in a pediatric population.
